

Title

Retraction: Community-centered approach to reversing metabolic syndrome

Abstract

Following publication, the authors reported data integrity concerns including duplicated demographic entries for three control-group participants in the baseline characteristics table. A corrected analysis with deduplicated records yielded substantively identical conclusions regarding program effectiveness and participant safety. The study's core findings remain scientifically valid; however, the journal requested retraction to maintain publication standards.